RJC Chain-of-Custody Standard – Precious Metals

The RJC is delighted to announce the Board's formal approval of the Chain-of-Custody (CoC) standard, application to gold and platinum group metals (platinum, palladium and rhodium). After commencing work in early 2010, the RJC has engaged with numerous Members and stakeholders over the past two years to develop a framework for chain-of-custody audits that can support responsible sourcing claims.

"The Council sincerely thanks the Co-chairs and members of the Standards Committee, Consultative Panel, stakeholders who provided feedback and input and the RJC management team. Their collective dedication and input have enabled RJC to create a new Standard that can be used to address emerging challenges and opportunities for the jewellery supply chain," says Dr Matthew Runci, RJC Chairman.

In summary, the RJC CoC Standard sets out requirements for a business to segregate CoC Material from other material in its custody, and to provide relevant information supporting the provenance of CoC Materials when transferred or sold to other parties. It can also be used more generally as a tool for due diligence in the precious metals supply chain. CoC Certification is voluntary, while the RJC Code of Practices remains compulsory for RJC Members. Training on the CoC Standard will be available to Member and Auditors from March 2012.

"A highlight of the CoC standards development process has been the engagement and collaboration with related standards organisations and initiatives. Because of the increasing focus on conflict-sensitive due diligence in the supply chain, it has been important to stay in touch with the work of related initiatives, consider connections and identify potential harmonisation opportunities. Through these efforts, we hope that RJC's work can help support the objectives of other initiatives and vice versa, and reduce duplication wherever possible," says Dr Fiona Solomon, RJC Standards Development Director.

In late 2011 some RJC Members in the diamond supply chain raised concerns regarding certain specific potential impediments for the implementation of the draft RJC CoC Standard in the diamond supply chain. As a result, the RJC Standards Committee agreed to temporarily suspend the finalisation of the draft RJC CoC Standard as it applies to diamonds so as to undertake additional consultation with the diamond industry concerning the feasibility of the draft RJC CoC Standard. A sub-committee of the Standards Committee has been formed for this purpose. The RJC also welcomes further input on these issues submitted by interested parties and looks forward to communicating progress in the coming months.

RJC Member Certification & Training Webinars

The RJC Certification Training continues to run each week to assist our members in working towards RJC Certification. We aim to keep all sessions to less than 60 minutes, to cover as many time zones as possible and each session is run multiple times throughout the year. We suggest Members start with training modules M1 – Preparing for Self Assessments, following that Members can take the other training modules in any order and as many times as they wish.

New Training Modules on the RJC Chain of Custody will be launched in March 2012.

For access to the online training please email: anna.leach@responsiblejewellery.com

A general introduction webinar recording can be viewed on our website and this is a good introduction to the RJC <http://www.responsiblejewellery.com/certification/training/>

The training page on the RJC website will continue to be updated to include helpful information for working towards achieving RJC Certification: <http://www.responsiblejewellery.com/certification/training/>

What Should Members Do First?

- Review the Core System Documents - Start with the RJC Certification Handbook for an overview of the requirements for achieving RJC Certification.
- Define your Certification Scope – This covers all Facilities that are owned or controlled by the Member; and actively contribute to the diamond and/or gold jewellery supply chain.
- Plan and Start your Self Assessment - A Self

Assessment is like an internal audit and prepares your business for the Verification Assessment (Third Party Audit). RJC's Self Assessment Workbook guides you through the process step by step.

- Attend the RJC's Free Online Training – The training will assist you as you start working through the RJC Certification Process. During Module M1 we look at the Self Assessment Process and how you might like to conduct this in your business
- Contact the RJC Team – As you work to achieve RJC Certification please don't hesitate to contact the RJC Team with any questions.

RJC & SAI Joint Training Session in Mumbai Wednesday 25th April 2012

The RJC will be offering a free place on this training to each RJC Member based in India. For more information please contact, anna.leach@responsiblejewellery.com

INSIGHT SESSION – INTERVIEW WITH RJC CERTIFIED MEMBERS

'Insights' is an ongoing section in The Monitor that encourages RJC Members to share their certification approach and learning. In this section, Luisa La Via, Corporate Social Responsibility and Internal Communication Executive Director, BULGARI, the first Italian Member to achieve certification, and Michael Allchin, Chief Executive and Assay Master of The Birmingham Assay Office, the first Assay Office in the world to be certified, have offered their advices on certification to readers.

Luisa La Via

INTERVIEW WITH LUISA LA VIA, BULGARI

1. What was your plan for carrying out the RJC Self Assessment?

We, at Bulgari, were deeply convinced that we were running our business in an ethical way and that some good practices were already in place. In this light, we welcomed the self assessment phase as the opportunity to monitor them, thus achieving a "CSR health check up".

To properly carry out the RJC Self Assessment it has been fundamental to create a dedicated team with an independent project leader to coordinate all the people/functions involved in the process. Furthermore, a clear project time frame and a detailed action plan are essential to meet the objective.

2. Who in your organization was involved in the process?

The certification process has been a success thanks to the great teamwork that enabled all the Company functions to work together to effectively accomplish all the requested tasks in a timely manner. HR, Logistic, Sales & Marketing, Legal, F/A and, more than anybody else, Jewellery and Watches Business Units have been working hard for the same objective. Of course, the sponsorship came from the very top management, but I would like to acknowledge the effort and passion shown by all the employees involved, especially those working in the production sites.

3. What were some of the key challenges?

First of all, the certification process should not come as an isolated project; it has to be included in a wider CSR strategy. Bulgari has designed its own CSR 3 year plan strategy and the RJC certification has been included in that plan. In order to do so, we have asked a third party independent agency to run a CSR assessment covering Social and Environmental issues. This phase is fundamental for a Company that wants to reach the proper level of awareness about its own CSR reality. After having received the feedback on the assessment and defined the action plan, the RJC certification has been inserted quite naturally in the plan.

4. Has implementing the RJC Certification System highlighted areas for improvement in your business?

There is always room for improvement, but I have to say that going through the workbook in a systematic way gives you the chance of a continuous learning process, mainly because the workbook is shared by colleagues of different functions who can easily give feedbacks one to each other.

5. What are the main benefits for your business in implementing the RJC Certification System?

The main benefit in implementing the RJC certification system is certainly the opportunity to get a better knowledge of your organization. The workbook preparation is so accurate and well structured that going through it is really easy and enlightening. You discover aspects about your organization you have never known before, and quiet often they are very positive things. And if you find critical issues, you have the right tool to fix them.

6. What advice do you have for other Members at this stage?

Do not panic, there is a lot to do but the process is very well designed, the tools very easy to use and the output is such an advantage to help you and your organization become a better one!

7. Would you encourage others to complete RJC Certification?

Yes, of course, do start as soon as possible!

B V L G A R I

INTERVIEW WITH MICHAEL ALLCHIN, THE BIRMINGHAM ASSAY OFFICE

Michael Allchin

1. What was your plan for carrying out the RJC Self Assessment?

Our RJC certification has an unusually wide scope, capturing not only our hallmarking activities but also the metal analysis carried out by The Laboratory and the gemstone testing done in our AnchorCert Gemmological Laboratory. The Birmingham Assay Office is already certificated to ISO9001:2008 and The Laboratory and AnchorCert are accredited to UKAS 17025. The first step to self assessment was therefore for our Quality Manger, Ian Bayley, to determine how much common ground there was between these Quality Management Systems and the requirements of the Responsible Jewellery Council certification, and to identify where additional work would be required.

2. Who in your organization was involved in the process?

Once Ian had begun the process, the entire Senior Management team was involved in putting together the additional documents that were required and cascading information throughout the workforce. The Birmingham Assay Office has 150 employees, including some at "off site" locations within the distribution centres of retailers, importers and manufacturers. All staff were included in the process via a series of presentations explaining the Assay Office's commitment to RJC and the importance of social, ethical, environmental and humanitarian principles to the future of our industry. There were also some new documents such as the Anti Bribery policy procedures to be accepted by all staff.

Ian Bayley

3. What were some of the key challenges?

The Birmingham Assay Office was founded in 1773 by Act of Parliament to carry out its statutory duty of assaying (testing) metals and applying the legally required UK hallmarks. Integrity, honesty and transparency are vital to its continued existence and are therefore an inherent part of the culture. Many employees have more than 25 years service and several are from families with a long history of working at the Assay Office.

Most of the responsible practices required by the RJC are therefore a long established norm, embedded in the culture of mutual trust, pride and commitment at the Assay Office. However, they are not necessarily formally documented as would be the case in a much more recently established company. The main challenge was to deliver documentary evidence to prove that some of the required practices and principles were in place, although their actual application was never in doubt.

4. Has implementing the RJC Certification System highlighted areas for improvement in your business?

The self assessment and audits revealed a few areas where improvements could be made. For example new legal requirements imposed on recently appointed staff with regard to proving their right to work in the UK had not been retrospectively applied to long standing members of staff. Also, while The Assay Office takes Health and Safety very seriously, attention is inevitably focused on high risk areas where dangerous chemicals and high temperatures are commonplace. The assessment revealed some of the more general Health and Safety measures such as ladder safety to be less well documented.

These areas have all been sharpened up, with clear policies in place for the benefit of employees, customers and the business itself.

5. What are the main benefits for your business in implementing the RJC Certification System?

The Mission Statement of Birmingham Assay Office clearly states its purpose as being "to champion quality standards in the wider jewellery and precious metals and gemstones industries, in order to protect the public and the good reputation of the trade." We strongly believe that social, humanitarian, ethical and environmental standards in our industry need to be, and can be, improved and are keen to support the work of the RJC.

We recognize that, like many other initiatives, this is a long hard struggle which may not deliver a perfect solution, but doing nothing is simply not an option. We have supported the RJC since its inception and were unofficial ambassadors and advisors for it long before we were members. I welcomed the opportunity to be elected as a Director of the RJC, in order to make a proper contribution. Our status as a certified member indicates that we not only support the standards but have truly bought into them.

6. What advice do you have for other Members at this stage?

Our support for the RJC has been public for several years and "The Great Debate" event, which we have staged in cooperation with Reed Exhibitions at International Jewellery London for the last five years, has provided RJC with an opportunity to speak direct to the UK trade.

In turn we have already advised several of our big customers as to the benefits of RJC to the industry as a whole and I am pleased to say they are now also certified members.

Our advice would always be to participate and make a contribution. Achieving certification is not as daunting as people might think. It will definitely benefit everyone's business by making them review it through different eyes, as well adding credibility to their brand principles.

7. Would you encourage others to complete RJC Certification?

Yes. Definitely. The RJC will only succeed in delivering improvements if it has the wholehearted support of the supply chain. There is still a long way to go, it is important that everyone helps in whatever way they can.

We would like to thank BULGARI and The Birmingham Assay Office for their useful perspectives. If you have comments, or would like to share your organisation's approach and learning, please contact Mila Bonini, RJC's Communications Manager, at mila.bonini@responsiblejewellery.com

Two highly respected trade associations have joined RJC

RJC welcomes two highly respected trade organizations to the Council's membership: Assogemme, the Italian independent association of major Italian gemstone jewellers and the Canadian Jewellers Association, the trade association representing the Canadian jewellery industry since 1918. They both join 360 companies and key international and national trade associations such as Jewelers of America, the American Gem Society, the National Association of Goldsmiths, the British Jewellers Association, the World Gold Council, the Union Française BJOP, Confindustria Federorafi, Club degli Orafi Italia, Platinum Guild International (PGI), the International Diamond Manufacturers Association (IDMA), Syndicat Saint Eloi, the Dutch Federatie Goud en Zilver and the Antwerp World Diamond Centre as Members of the RJC.

RJC Trade Association Members play a pivotal role in building awareness of the value of RJC membership. Through their strong national ties, RJC Trade Associations can also assist their members in offering tailored guidance, advice and support in the steps toward RJC Member Certification.

"Assogemme is honoured to have joined the Responsible Jewellery Council as the first Italian association of Gem and Precious Stones. Since its inception, the respect of ethical values has been a key principle for our association. We look forward to a close collaboration with the Council and to offer our input and expertise on a future standard for coloured gemstones. As a Trade Association Member of the RJC, Assogemme has the ability to proactively inform and support its own members willing to conform to the RJC's Code of Practices, on a national basis and internationally," says Paolo Cesari, President of Assogemme.

About Assogemme

Assogemme, or the 'Associazione Italiana fra le Aziende delle Pietre Preziose ed Affini' - which translates as the Italian Association of Gem and Precious Stones' Companies - was founded in July 2007. The aim of the association is to be the mouthpiece for those Italian companies which trade in gemstones and are committed to deal with the main issues facing the industry, in an independent and resolute manner, believing in those key principles: gemstone and ethics; code of conduct in the supply chain and Made in Italy.

David Ritter

"We are very pleased to add the CJA's support with the many international jewellery associations which are current members of the Responsible Jewellery Council. As the voice of the Canadian jewellery industry, it is our continued commitment to expand our presence outside of Canada to better serve our members," says J. David Ritter, President & CEO, Canadian Jewellers Association.

About Canadian Jewellers Association

The Canadian Jewellers Association (CJA) has been the voice of the Canadian jewellery industry since 1918. The CJA provides leadership and education to ensure the adoption of best practices among all its members. It promotes information sharing, ensuring fair and equitable consideration by all levels of government. It assists its members to afford services, information and technologies that support the equality, security and profitability of their businesses, creating consumer trust and respect for the Canadian jewellery industry.

An important area of focus of the CJA is 'Education' through our Jewellery Education Training System (JETS), Accredited Appraiser Program (AAP) and our partnerships offering programs such as MasterValuer™. The CJA is the first point of contact for industry, media and government for advice and support on matters affecting the Canadian and International jewellery marketplace.

Our international alliances such as Jewelers of America, Responsible Jewellery Council, Jewelers Leadership Forum members and associations in Britain and Australia assist the CJA to inform our members of international issues that could affect their day to day business.

OECD Gold Supplement – update

The OECD Gold Supplement was endorsed in February 2012 by the OECD's Gold Working Group. RJC and several Members participated in the Working Group and the smaller Drafting Committee for the Supplement. It will now progress through OECD Committees for approval before formal publication, expected in April/May this year. The Gold Supplement will complete the OECD Due Diligence Guidance for Responsible Supply Chains of Minerals from Conflict-Affected and High-Risk Areas, which is applicable to gold, tin, tungsten and tantalum. RJC plans to develop some training modules on implementing the OECD Due Diligence Guidance in the jewellery supply chain and hopes to have these available from May.

Chain-of-Custody – January 2012 presentations

In January, RJC presented updates on the Chain-of-Custody standard to the Vicenza Fair, the Salon International de la Haute Horlogerie (SIHH) and the Union Française BJOP. Thanks to Mr Roberto Ditre, President of Fiera di Vicenza together with Mrs Licia Mattioli, President of Confindustria Federorafi who introduced the session in Vicenza and to Mrs Fabienne Lupo, Chairwoman and Managing Director of Fondation de la Haute Horlogerie and Mrs Bernadette Pinet-Cuoq of the Union Française BJOP who kindly hosted RJC's sessions.

Diamonds sub-committee – update

In December 2011, RJC announced that it would temporarily suspend the finalisation of the draft RJC CoC Standard as it applies to diamonds so as to undertake additional consultation with the diamond industry concerning the feasibility of the draft RJC CoC Standard. A Sub-Committee to the Standards Committee has been formed for this process, co-chaired by Mark Jenkins (Signet Jewelers Limited) and Derek Palmer (Pluczenik Diamond Company NV). The Sub-Committee's Terms of Reference are being developed for work during 2012.

Stakeholders interested in this issue are also welcome to provide input and feedback to the RJC. To facilitate further consultation on these issues, drafts of the CoC Standard applicable to diamonds and precious metals are available on the RJC website. These reflect the input received from the 3 rounds of public comment held during 2010 and 2011.

Marange Diamonds - Reminder

European and US-based companies should be aware that the Zimbabwe Mining Development Corporation (ZMDC), which has a substantial stake in both Mbada and Marange Resources, remains subject to EU Restrictive Measures and US Office of Foreign Assets Control (OFAC) sanctions. Any transaction through which funds or economic resources were made available, directly or indirectly (including through a third party), to or for the benefit of ZMDC would be in breach of these regulations.

Human Rights Watch Report

In December 2011, Human Rights Watch published a report on artisanal gold mining and child labour in Mali, Africa's third largest gold producer. An estimated 20,000 to 40,000 children work in the mines, digging pits, working underground, carrying, panning, and crushing ore, and using mercury to extract the gold. Children start working as young as six years old, and many never go to school. Many child laborers are migrants, and risk becoming victims of trafficking or sexual exploitation.

The report, based on over 150 interviews, urges government, UN agencies, donors, civil society, artisanal miners, traders, and companies to take action to end the use of child labour in artisanal gold mining, improve access to education for child labourers, and address mercury-related problems. The RJC Code of Practices and the Fairtrade-Fairmined standards are mentioned as initiatives that seek to address child labour and other human rights issues in artisanal gold mining.
