Responsible Jewellery Council announces SGS as Accredited Auditors

London - The Responsible Jewellery Council (RJC) today announced SGS as the second auditing firm accredited by the RJC to carry out verifications of Members' business practices.

"I am delighted to welcome SGS as an accredited auditing company to the RJC System. The accreditation of SGS adds another highly regarded, international auditing company with considerable jewellery industry expertise and a global presence to serve the RJC's growing membership," says Michael Rae, RJC's Chief Executive Officer.

"With over 240 Members committed to independent third party audits under the RJC System, there is an undoubted demand for accredited auditors. RJC will announce the accreditation of additional auditing companies in coming weeks," says Michael Rae.

SGS is one of the world's leading inspection, verification, testing and certification companies. Recognized as a global benchmark for quality and integrity, SGS employs 59,000 people and operates a network of more than 1,000 offices and laboratories around the world. SGS is a UKAS accredited international provider to ISO/IEC 17021:2006 for providing audits and certifications of management systems.

The current structure of SGS, consisting of 10 business segments operating across 10 geographical regions, was formed in 2001. From its beginnings in 1878 as a grain inspection house, SGS has steadily grown into the role of one of the industry leaders.

"We are very proud to be accredited to the RJC System. High-performing business processes are at the heart of today's economy. The audit and certification services we can provide to RJC Members allow them to enhance their business processes. Through certification, they can deliver extra value, improve quality management and performance, minimize risk, and gain a real advantage over their competition," says Frankie Ng, Executive Vice President, Consumer Testing Services, SGS.
